The answer is simple: a Pirelli. Adb is a tool that provides access to some attributes of some Android devices. The project was written to support devices made by some major manufacturers. It does not work for.” The logic of the mayor’s argument is inescapable: If guns were everywhere — in movie theatres, churches, airports, grocery stores, bars and restaurants — there would be many more accidents, injuries and deaths. Maybe even one suicide or death from a terrorist or madman. Mass shootings are almost all committed by people with a criminal record. Restricting gun ownership based on that criminal record doesn't preclude gun ownership by law-abiding citizens who can now legally buy a gun for self-protection. Here's why: It's not a fact that a criminal would have a gun. It's a fact that he or she commits crime. That means you're equally likely to run into a criminal who is armed or unarmed. And when you're in the presence of a law-abiding citizen with a gun, you're less likely to be held up by a criminal.

Seventeen people in Anaheim have been murdered since 2009. Since the polls closed in the mayor's race, the next mayor will be in charge of their communities. This is not the time to turn the city over to someone who is obsessed with disarming the citizens of Anaheim. john.myers@latimes.com Follow @johnmyers on Twitter, sign up for our daily Essential Politics newsletter and listen to the weekly California Politics Podcast

I need the](#) .Q: Drawing jagged edges on iPhone I have an app where I need to draw a shape which has a jagged edge. See below. I'm basically using `CAShapeLayer` to draw the shape, but I can't seem to figure out how to get the "accent lines" like the ones in the black example. (See the inset of black example) I have seen this question on SO, but I have not implemented it yet (for reasons explained below). Anyone have any ideas? Thanks A: OK, so I have a finished solution and I wanted to share it, in case anyone else happens to be looking for it. Basically I just created a new `UIBezierPath` object, then I used a `UIBezierPathShader` to render the draw path. It then turned the path into a UIBezierPath (just like what I was doing before, but a bit differently) It works great. of the supernatural. Also, reflecting the aforementioned tactic of the show to keep us guessing about the identity of both the "ghost" and the "monster," the episode is a perfect jumping on point for viewers who might be caught in the weeds and still be unsure which character's ghost it is or whether the monster
